

Regional Data Bulletin

County-to-County Commuting
Flows, 2006-2010

+The Delaware Valley Regional Planning Commission (DVRPC) is an interstate, inter-county, and intercity agency serving the Philadelphia-Camden-Trenton metropolitan area. As the region's metropolitan planning organization, the commission provides technical assistance and services to its member state and local governments. Delaware Valley Data is our periodic series of free data bulletins, analytical data reports, data reference guides, and data snapshots.

This regional data bulletin provides county-level information on residence-to-workplace flows in DVRPC's 28-county data services area. The Commission's extended data services area (illustrated on the map on page 3) includes New Castle and Kent counties in Delaware; Cecil and Harford counties in Maryland; Atlantic, Burlington, Camden, Cape May, Cumberland, Gloucester, Hunterdon, Mercer, Middlesex, Monmouth, Ocean, Salem, Somerset, and Warren counties in New Jersey; and Berks, Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Lancaster, Lehigh, Montgomery, Northampton, Philadelphia, and York counties in Pennsylvania.

Background

This regional data bulletin presents information on county-to-county commuting patterns. This information was used by the federal Office of Management and Budget (OMB) to revise the delineations of the nation's Metropolitan Statistical Areas (MSAs), Micropolitan Statistical Areas, and Combined Statistical Areas (CSAs). Since 1951, OMB has been charged with delineating national statistical areas. These classifications are revised comprehensively every 10 years and updated periodically as needed, and provide a nationally consistent framework for use by all federal agencies that collect, analyze, and publish data. Through 2000, commuting data was collected through the long-form sample questionnaire of the decennial Census of Population and Housing, completed by one in every six of the nation's households. This census questionnaire has since been replaced by the American Community Survey, which samples far fewer households at a given time but is collected monthly and aggregated to achieve statistically significant samples. The most recent OMB revisions, published in February 2013, rely on the results of the ACS's 2006–2010 five-year estimates.

By definition, MSAs have at least one urbanized area of 50,000 or more residents plus an adjacent area that has a high degree of social and economic integration with the core, as measured by commuter ties. Micropolitan Statistical Areas have at least one urban cluster of at least 10,000 but less than 50,000 residents, plus an adjacent territory with a high degree of integration. MSAs containing a single core with at least 2.5 million residents (including the Philadelphia-Camden-Wilmington MSA) may also be subdivided into smaller groups of counties referred to as Metropolitan Divisions. Based on specific criteria, adjacent MSAs and Micropolitan Statistical Areas may also be linked to form CSAs.

Approximately 94 percent of the U.S. population lives in an area delineated within these classifications, including 85 percent living in the nation's 381 MSAs and about nine percent in smaller Micropolitan Statistical Areas. Of the nation's 3,143 counties, 37 percent (1,167) are in MSAs, 20 percent are in Micropolitan Statistical Areas, and 43 percent are unclassified.

Highlights

Table 1 summarizes the number of workers who worked within their home county and Table 2 presents similar data for each of the 28 counties in the extended data services area. Table 3 identifies the most common workplace destination for workers who commuted outside of their home county.

- Almost 64 percent of the employees in DVRPC’s 28-county extended data services area worked somewhere within their home county, including 81 percent of the workers living in the two Delaware counties; 67 percent of the workers living in the 10 Pennsylvania counties; 57 percent living in the 14 New Jersey counties; and 51 percent living in the two Maryland counties.
- In the nine-county DVRPC region, almost 62 percent of workers commuted to a workplace within their home county, including almost 67 percent of the workers in the five Pennsylvania counties and 52 percent of workers in the four New Jersey counties. This percentage is highest in Philadelphia (where almost 76 percent of city residents who worked commuted to a workplace somewhere within the city) and lowest in Gloucester County, New Jersey (where only 46 percent of resident workers worked within their home county).
- Counties where more than 50 percent of the resident workers commuted to a workplace outside their home county include Warren, Hunterdon, Somerset, Gloucester, and Salem counties (all in New Jersey) and Cecil County, Maryland.
- Counties with the highest percentages of resident workers who worked within their home county include Lancaster, Philadelphia, Berks, Lehigh, and York counties (in Pennsylvania); Atlantic, Cape May, and Cumberland counties (in New Jersey); and New Castle and Kent counties (in Delaware).
- Outside of their home counties, the most common workplace destination for workers in both Bucks and Chester counties was Montgomery County. Given this increased level of suburb-to-suburb commuting, the region’s five southeastern Pennsylvania counties have been split into two separate Metropolitan Divisions: the Montgomery County-Bucks County-Chester County, Pennsylvania division and the Philadelphia, Pennsylvania division (which includes Delaware County).
- Mercer County, New Jersey, remains the only one of DVRPC’s nine member counties not affiliated with the Philadelphia-Camden-Wilmington, Pennsylvania-New Jersey-Delaware MSA. This classification is based on commuting patterns, with 68 percent of the county’s resident workers working in Mercer County; another nine percent commuting to Middlesex County, New Jersey; and only eight percent working in one of DVRPC’s other eight counties.

- In the DVRPC region, Philadelphia is a net importer of workers from all counties except Montgomery County, Pennsylvania (where 60,159 Montgomery County residents work in Philadelphia but 60,551 Philadelphia residents work in Montgomery County) and (at a smaller scale) Mercer County, New Jersey (where 1,555 Mercer County residents work in Philadelphia but 2,210 Philadelphia residents work in Mercer County).

Statistical Area Delineations Within DVRPC's 28-County Data Services Area

The county-to-county commuting patterns described in this bulletin were used by OMB to revise the delineations of the nation's MSAs, Micropolitan Statistical Areas, and CSAs. These classifications provide a consistent geographic framework for use by all federal agencies that collect, analyze, and publish data. Originally revised based on data from the sample questionnaire of the decennial Census of Population and Housing, the most recent OMB revisions rely instead on the results of the ACS's 2006–2010 five-year estimates. All federal agencies that collect data, including the U.S. Census Bureau and others such as the departments of Transportation, Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development, and Environmental Protection, aggregate and analyze data for these common geographic areas, allowing these agencies and other researchers to cross-tabulate and compare information from numerous sources.

As noted earlier in this bulletin, MSAs have at least one urbanized area of 50,000 or more residents plus an adjacent area that has a high degree of social and economic integration with the core. Adjacent MSAs may also be linked to form larger CSAs. The 28 counties that comprise DVRPC's extended data services area are part of 16 different MSAs, ranging in size from areas with one single county to MSAs with multiple metropolitan divisions, each of which has several counties. The region's MSAs are also part of three larger CSAs that have as their core cities Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; New York, New York; and Washington, DC. Based on their degree of social and economic integration as measured through commuting patterns, the 28 counties in DVRPC's extended data services area are delineated in statistical areas as follows. Other counties included within these areas but located outside of DVRPC's data services area are also listed.
